

This is a detailed topographic map of the state of Wyoming. The map uses a color gradient to represent elevation, with lighter shades of tan and yellow indicating lower elevations and darker shades of brown and black indicating higher elevations. The state's county boundaries are shown as thin black lines. Major cities and towns are labeled with black text, including Jackson, Cheyenne, Casper, and Laramie. The map also shows the state's major rivers, such as the Snake River and the Yellowstone River, and the Great Salt Lake in the northeast. The word "Wyoming" is written in large, bold, black letters in the top right corner. The map is framed by a thin black border.
